

(Im)perfect

For this project I am representing females' bodies that may not always be represented in mainstream media, maybe due to their size, stretch marks, scars or even cellulite. They will be photographed in a way that highlights these imperfections to let them, and everyone else know that these parts of our bodies are completely normal. I knew I wanted to use photography as the medium for my final major project because I knew it was my strength and would allow me to showcase the skills I have managed to build. I myself have encountered body image issues and felt passionate about how females can be represented in the media, particularly how their bodies are shown. I felt as though this project was a great way to get more body types out there and show a more positive light on different types of female bodies.

I am a third year media production student at Solent University, but my main focus is photography. It is something I have always enjoyed from college through university. I particularly enjoy photographing people in the studio as I have full creative control of what I want to create. I'm passionate about body image and representation of people that aren't always seen in photography.

(Im)perfect is a series of images of female bodies, uncovering their so-called imperfections to show us that all bodies are normal, beautiful and should be showcased for all to see.
